

Archer Electrical

CASE STUDY/RETAIL/ 004 SEPT 12

CLIENT: MANOLO BLAHNIK
 LOCATION: Harrods, Knightsbridge
 DESCRIPTION: Full Electrical Installation
 DATE: September 2012

We were delighted to add to our portfolio of electrical installations within London's iconic store Harrods, this time a boutique for legendary shoemaker Manolo Blahnik.

Once awarded this project we accomplished the challenge of successfully completing the electrical design, installation, commissioning and handover to the client within a minimal two week period.

The lighting scheme met the requirements for a low ambient light level with the need for brightly lit products which focused the customers attention immediately on the shoes when entering the space.

Working alone without assistants or apprentices, Manolo Blahnik is solely responsible for the design of every one of the thousands of shoes that bear his name. He has dominated shoe design since setting up in business in London in the early 1970s, his shoes have rapidly become a symbol of pure classical style for the 21st century. Blahnik's boutiques are located in London, New York, Las Vegas, Dublin, Athens, Madrid, Istanbul, Dubai, Kuwait, Hong Kong, Seoul, Singapore and Stockholm.

Testimonial:
 What the client said:

"The project was completed within a short time scale to the high standard befitting of a luxury store with minimal snagging. This was achieved within the agreed budget for the project. We would certainly use Archer Electrical again and happily recommend them"
